

Community Working Group

4.23.18 Meeting Packet

Where is this data from?

These comments were received during the Reaching Out phase of the project in Fall and Winter of 2017. They are the result of an activity that asked participants about their hopes for the future of their neighborhood.

The bar graph below shows the most common comments. The following pages include all of the responses, in participants' original words. They are loosely sorted into categories to help you navigate the data.

How are we using this?

Working group members (you!) will help create the activity for the large community event in June. Trade-offs will inevitably have to be made during the planning process, so the goal is to identify those potential areas of tension so they can guide the work done in June. The input about trade-offs gathered in June will allow us to set goals, write policies, and prioritize the action plan. Read through your neighbors' comments and find areas where common suggestions run against each other. Participants at the community-wide event in June will not be able to delve into every single action item, so knowing where decisions need to be made will prepare us all for a more productive event.
